The chocolate industry is a multi-billion dollar global business, but for the women who grow and harvest cacao, the beans that are used to make chocolate, the benefits have been few and far between. In the Congo Basin, where some of the world's finest cacao is grown, women are often paid less than men for their labor, and they have little say in how the cocoa industry is run.

The Divas of the Deepest Chocolate are a group of talented women who are working to change that. Founded in 2010, the Divas are a collective of women from the Congo Basin who are dedicated to promoting and supporting chocolate made from cacao grown in the region. The Divas work to empower women in the cocoa industry by providing them with training, resources, and market access.

Empowering Women

The Divas of the Deepest Chocolate believe that women are the key to transforming the cocoa industry. Women make up the majority of the workforce in the cocoa sector, but they are often marginalized and underpaid. The Divas are working to change that by providing women with the skills and resources they need to succeed.

The Divas offer a variety of training programs for women cocoa farmers. These programs cover topics such as sustainable farming practices, post-harvest processing, and business management. The Divas also provide women with access to financing and market opportunities.

The Divas' work is having a real impact on the lives of women in the Congo Basin. Many women who have participated in the Divas' programs have reported increased incomes, improved working conditions, and greater control over their lives.
