

Heartsongs For Fragile Planet: A Journey Through Music, Poetry, and Nature

Heartsongs For Fragile Planet is a multimedia project that celebrates the beauty of our planet and the power of music and poetry to inspire environmental activism. The project was founded by singer-songwriter Carrie Newcomer and poet Jane Hirshfield, and features contributions from over 50 artists, including musicians, poets, photographers, and filmmakers.

The project began in 2006, when Newcomer and Hirshfield were invited to participate in a conference on climate change. They were inspired by the passion and commitment of the scientists and activists they met, and they realized that they wanted to use their art to make a difference in the fight against climate change.

The short films in the series are all about the power of music and poetry to inspire environmental activism. The films feature interviews with artists, scientists, and activists, and they show how the arts can be used to raise awareness about environmental issues and motivate people to take action.

Heartsongs For Fragile Planet is a powerful and moving project that celebrates the beauty of our planet and the power of music and poetry to inspire environmental activism. The project is a reminder that we all have a role to play in protecting the planet, and that art can be a powerful tool for change.

The Music of Heartsongs For Fragile Planet

The music on the Heartsongs For Fragile Planet CD is a mix of genres, including folk, rock, classical, and world music. The lyrics are all inspired by the natural world, and they explore themes of beauty, vulnerability, and hope.

One of the standout tracks on the album is "Fragile Planet" by Carrie Newcomer. The song is a beautiful and haunting ballad that captures the vulnerability of our planet. Newcomer's voice is clear and emotive, and the lyrics are both poetic and powerful.

Another highlight of the album is "The River" by Mary Gauthier. The song is a moving and intimate portrait of a river, and Gauthier's vocals are both passionate and vulnerable. The lyrics are poetic and evocative, and they capture the beauty and power of the natural world.

The album also includes tracks by other talented artists, including Jackson Browne, Janis Ian, and John Gorka. Each song is unique and beautiful, and together they create a powerful and moving tribute to our planet.

The Poetry of Heartsongs For Fragile Planet

The book of poetry in the Heartsongs For Fragile Planet project features poems by Jane Hirshfield and other poets who have been inspired by the natural world. The poems are lyrical and evocative, and they offer a unique perspective on the beauty and fragility of our planet.

One of the standout poems in the book is "The World Is Too Much With Us" by William Wordsworth. The poem is a meditation on the beauty of the natural world and the importance of spending time in nature. Wordsworth's words are both beautiful and thought-provoking, and they offer a timeless reminder of the importance of protecting our planet.

Another highlight of the book is "Elegy for a River" by Mary Oliver. The poem is a moving and elegiac tribute to a river that has been polluted and destroyed. Oliver's words are both powerful and poignant, and they offer a powerful reminder of the need to protect our environment.

The book also includes poems by other talented poets, including Gary Snyder, Wendell Berry, and Robert Hass. Each poem is unique and beautiful, and together they create a powerful and moving tribute to our planet.

The Films of Heartsongs For Fragile Planet

The short films in the Heartsongs For Fragile Planet series are all about the power of music and poetry to inspire environmental activism. The films feature interviews with artists, scientists, and activists, and they show how the arts can be used to raise awareness about environmental issues and motivate people to take action.

One of the standout films in the series is "The Music of Change." The film features interviews with musicians, poets, and activists who are using their art to make a difference in the fight against climate change. The film is both inspiring and informative, and it shows how the arts can be a powerful tool for change.

Another highlight of the series is "The River." The film follows a group of musicians and poets as they travel down the Mississippi River, performing songs and poems about the river and the environment. The film is a beautiful and moving tribute to the power of music and poetry to inspire environmental activism.

The series also includes other films about the power of music and poetry to inspire environmental activism. Each film is unique and powerful, and together they create a compelling call to action for protecting our planet.

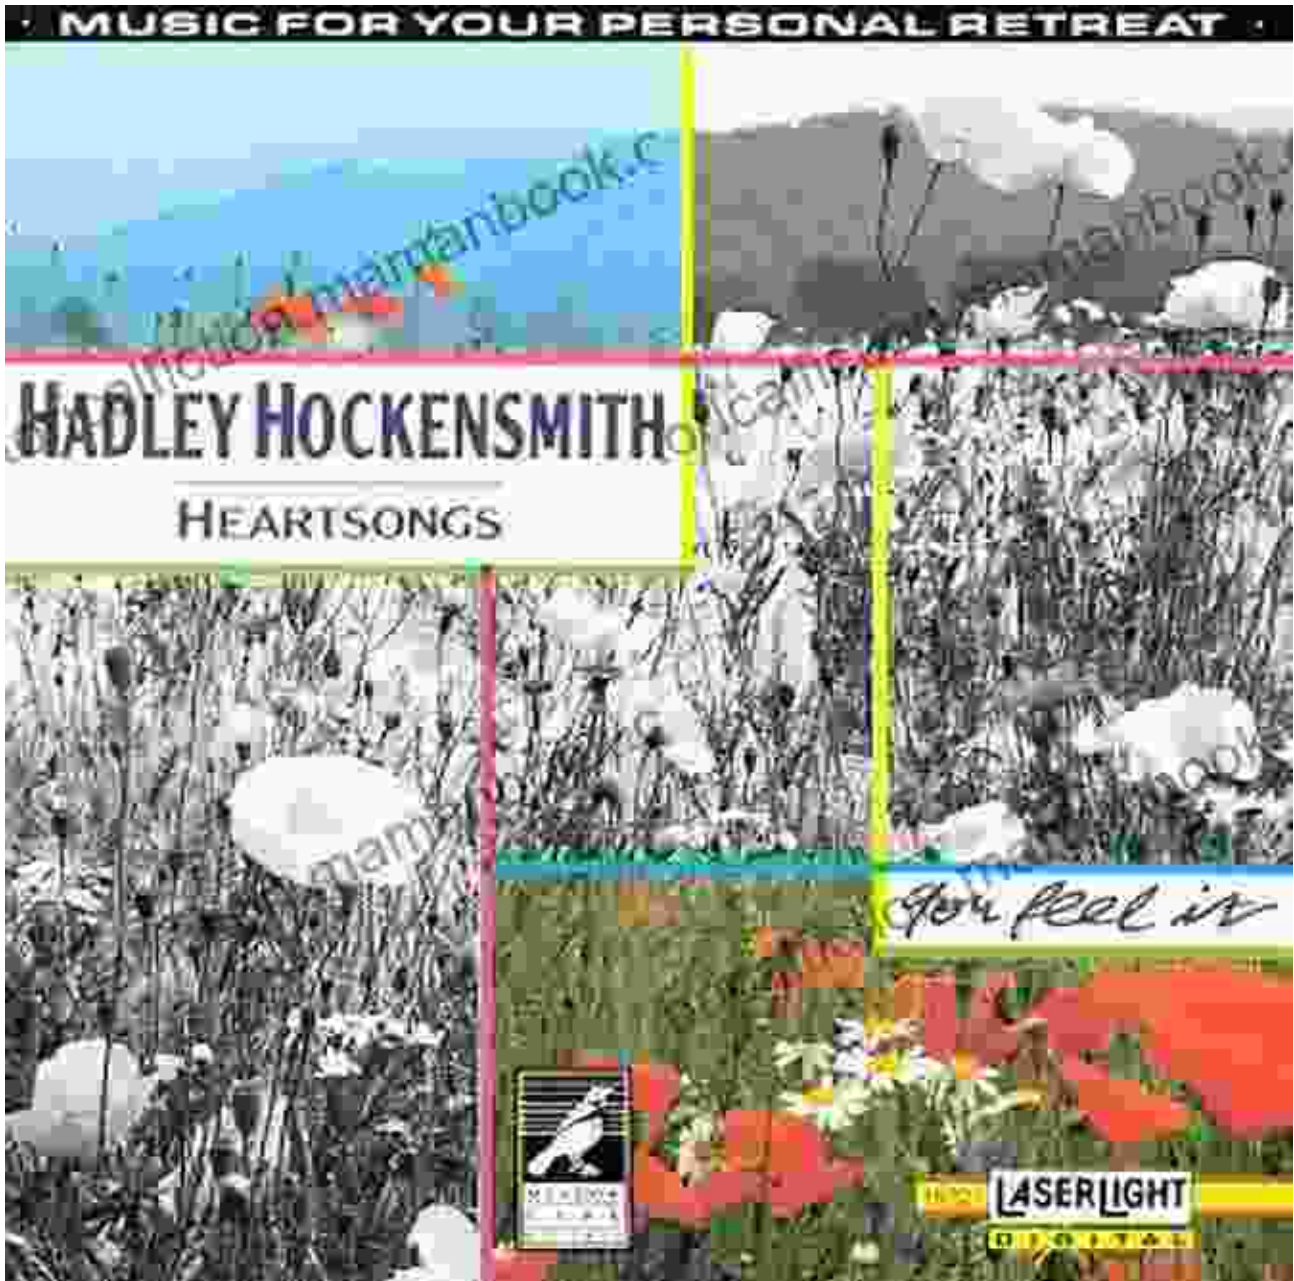

The Impact of Heartsongs For Fragile Planet

Heartsongs For Fragile Planet has been a powerful and influential project that has helped to raise awareness about environmental issues and inspire people to take action. The project has been featured in numerous media outlets, including The New York Times, The Washington Post, and The Los Angeles Times. It has also been endorsed by environmental organizations such as the Sierra Club and the National Audubon Society.

The project has also had a direct impact on environmental policy. In 2009, the music from the Heartsongs For Fragile Planet CD was used in a campaign to pass a bill in the California State Legislature that created a new state park in the Mojave Desert. The bill was passed with overwhelming support, and it is a testament to the power of music and poetry to inspire change.
