Born in France in 1951, Petit first traveled to the Amazon in 1973. She was immediately captivated by the beauty and diversity of the rainforest, and she soon realized the importance of protecting this vital ecosystem.

In 1975, Petit founded the Association for the Defense of the Amazon (ADDA), a non-profit organization that works to protect the rainforest and its inhabitants. ADDA has implemented a wide range of programs, including reforestation projects, sustainable agriculture initiatives, and education programs.

Petit has also been a vocal advocate for indigenous rights. She believes that indigenous peoples are the best stewards of the rainforest, and she has worked tirelessly to support their efforts to protect their land and culture.

In recognition of her tireless work, Petit has received numerous awards, including the Goldman Environmental Prize in 1990 and the Order of the Southern Cross in 2002.

Mama Amazonica Pascale Petit is a true inspiration. Her story is a testament to the power of one person to make a difference in the world.

Mama Amazonica's Work in the Amazon Rainforest

Mama Amazonica Pascale Petit's work in the Amazon rainforest has focused on three main areas: conservation, sustainable development, and indigenous rights.

Conservation
